The next newsletter will be going out on 1st February, so until then, your Archaeolibrarians wish you a Merry Christmas, Happy Hanukkah, Blessed Yule - whichever holiday you observe! We hope it is full of love, hope, and plenty of books beneath your tree.

Take care and stay healthy!

The Lonely Vampire by Ann Greyson

After fleeing from a vampire witch hunt in Transylvania hundreds of years earlier, vampire Ileana Vladislava lives out a lonely existence in Wightwick Hall, a castle in the Jesmond Dene area of Newcastle upon Tyne, a city in Tyne and Wear, England. Still bearing the scars of her past, she avoids relationships with people and feeds on the blood of wild animals. The likelihood of the vengeful werewolf, Claymor, finding her also keeps her in a state of solitary.

Myrna Ivester spends a lot of time questioning her feelings and what she really wants. When Ileana sees Myrna at the Newcastle City Library, she feels it is her destiny to be a vampire. Ileana appears at Myrna's home, places her in a deep hypnotic trance, and turns her into a vampire. Subsequently, Myrna reflects on the deepest meaning of her life in her transformation into something supernatural as she develops a relationship with Ileana.

Told with wit and sentiment, this story provocatively explores the mysteries and complexities of the vampire world keeping its fangs in you until the very last sentence.
